OFF FOR ST. LOUIS

The Republican Delegates to the National Convention

LEFT THIS MORNING ON A SPECIAL TRAIN

The Train Stopped In Front of the Gazette Office, and the Delegates and Ladies Cheered the Live Paper

Have Gone to St. Louis.

The Republican delegates to the National Republican Convention, which will convene in St. Louis next Tuesday, passed through West Berkeley this morning at 10:45. The train was handsomely decorated with American flags and two long banners on which was inscribed, "California Republican Delegates to St. Louis."

The train consisted of a baggage car, two drawing room coaches and a dining car, and were fitted up elegantly for the comfort of the passengers, who consisted of the delegates and their wives and daughters, and special friends who desire to be present at the nomination of the next President of the United States.

In anticipation of the train going through today the publishers of the GAZETTE had a large sign 27 feet long and 6 feet wide, upon which was painted "The Berkeley GAZETTE and California for McKinley," hung up in front of the building.

When the train approached Posen station, it slowed down and came to a stop in front of the GAZETTE office. The delegates and their ladies crowded the platforms and windows and waved their handkerchiefs and cheered for McKinley and the GAZETTE, and were answered with a will by the GAZETTE force and numerous citizens who had assembled at the GAZETTE office to see the train go by.

After a stop of about three minutes the engineer blew his whistle and the train proceeded on its way to St. Louis.

The publishers of the GAZETTE appreciate very highly the compliment that was paid to the live paper of Berkeley, in stopping the train in front of our office, and return thanks to Mr. Wilder, the delegates and the gentleman who had charge of the train, for the recognition of the GAZETTE at this time and on this occasion.

Peralta Park.

The opening of the beautiful Peralta Park Hotel, under the strong and vigorous management of Mr. Parsons, makes a marked improvement in the prospects of this pretty little suburb of Berkeley. Yesterday Messrs. O. G. May & Co., sold Mr. Trowell a fine residence lot near the hotel; the first sale of a lot in that neighborhood we have heard of in a long time.

The sanitary plumbers had a meeting last evening at the office of Sanitary Inspector Thompson. After the routine business had been gone through with the following officers were nominated to be elected at the next meeting on Wednesday evening next:

The cast is as follows: Miss Cora Fiske, Mrs. Dr. Anthony and Mrs. Metcalf, George Wilcox, Dr. Anthony and Walter Gompertz.

The farce will be followed by a dance and light refreshments.

Aubrey Robinson and family of Mikawell, Kawai, Hawaiian Islands are visiting Mr. Sinclair at the Berryman place, North Berkeley. Mr. Robinson in company with Miss Gay and Mr. Sinclair will visit Yosemite and from there will go to Los Angeles.

The Nobles' Company has made a decided hit at the Oakland Theatre.

PROF. HILGARD

Has Published His Annual Agricultural Report.

Annual Report of Prof. Hilgard.

The annual report for 1896 of the agricultural department of the university has been published by the State Printer and is ready for distribution.

It is a large book of nearly 500 pages, liberally illustrated and containing elaborate reports of the work done by the different branches of the department, together with many tables.

Much of the volume is devoted to accounts of investigation of diseases of fruits, etc., and of the examination of different soils.

In a letter of transmittal to President Kellogg Professor Hilgard calls attention to the increased attendance of graduate students in the lecture and laboratory courses of his department, and expresses the opinion that the overcrowding of the professions of law medicine and literature will result in greater inclination on the part of young men to engage in agriculture. "Agriculture requires quite as much brain work and intelligence as do the other professions," says the Professor.

"Contrary to the policy defined and pursued by many United States and European stations, I hold that it is the first duty of our stations to minister to the pressing needs of farmers on questions on which their own experience and often existing literature furnish them little or no information.

"Scientific investigation of such questions will almost invariably lead to the development of new facts and principles, which is one of the main objects for which the stations were established."

Lorin.

Mrs. I. H. Shuey, of Benton street, a member of the Press Association was called to the bedside of her father Rev. J. R. Hinman at Sheridan Placer County, who is very sick and not expected to live.

Mrs. Solomon Waterman has taken her departure for Trinity County, to join her husband who is Superintendent of the Cinnabar Mines in that section of the State.

George Crew, Joshua Crew, Josie Louise Crew and Mrs. J. L. Crew, Robt. Alwyn, Stella Alwyn, and Mrs. Alwyn left this morning for Mayburgs, Niles Canyon, where they will camp out for a couple of months.

Harry Greenough of Lorin has started a cyclery at Temescal.

A hydrant on the corner of Adeline street and Alcatraz avenue was turned on this morning to fill a water cart. When the cart was full it was found impossible to shut off the flow of water from the hydrant. The Water Company was immediately notified and an employee was sent to Lorin to make the necessary repairs.

Catholic Knights of America

The Catholic Knights of America held an open meeting last evening in the rooms of the Crescent Athletic Club, Odd Fellows Hall, East Berkeley. The State President Brophy spoke concerning the benefits of the Order, and eight or nine new members joined. After the speaking there was a short programme as follows:

The opening was by music, followed by Miss Anna Cain, a comical recitation by Mr. Hoyt; a vocal solo by Mr. Leach and a flute solo by Mr. Shay, of Temescal, followed by a piano solo, "Moonlight on the Hudson," by Miss Anna Cain. All of the numbers were well executed, and received the deserved applause from the audience. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

The hall was handsomely decorated on all sides. St. Joseph lillies being quite prominent and showing to good advantage. Flags were draped about the main stand, and the whole room had a warm, cordial appearance. There were visitors from Oakland, Temescal and other places. Everybody enjoyed themselves and seemed to feel anxious to know when, taking their departure, the next social of the same kind would take place.

Cut out the coupons in another col. and have your dealer if he is an advertiser in the GAZETTE, sign them. Sign them yourself and place yourself in line for one of the GAZETTE'S handsome and useful presents.

The family of O.G. May left today for Sunol, near which place they will camp out for awhile.

SHE IS FREE AS A BIRD.

Judge Frick Says Dr Crowley Was Cruel

SO HE GRANTED MRS. CLARA CROWLEY A DIVORCE.

She Is to GEt $125 Per Month Allmony and to Have the Home Until She Remarries.

Crowley Was Cruel.

The Crowley divorce case is ended. Behind closed doors yesterday morning the doctor and his wife told their tales of marital woe to Judge Frick, and when the doors opened each was free to make a third attempt at proving that marriage is not a chronic failure.

Mrs. Alma A. Crowley was awarded the homestead on Alice street till she shall remarry, in which event the house goes to the two minor children, of which she is the custodian. The doctor is also to allow her $125 per month and pay her taxes, insurance and to keep her home in repair.

Dr. Crowley profits in so far as his reputation is concerned, because the more serious allegation of the complaint is declared to be not proven and unfounded. It is, however, of record that he cruelly hurt his wife's feelings, and on this ground alone was the divorce granted.

When the case was called W. W. Foote was allied with R. M. Fitzgerald in the interests of Dr. Crowley. Judging by their suavity and their evident desire to arrive at a speedy and mutually agreeable conclusion, it might be supposed that they were lifelong friends. Certainly there was nothing to indicate that three days ago the two men rent the Democracy of Alameda County in twain in the fiercest and most personal political fight ever seen in this hotbed of political strife.

The case was set for 10 o'clock, but up to 11:30 the plaintiff had not arrived, nor were there any witnesses about. This gave rise to the surmise that an attempt was being made to settle without a trial. After considerable whispered consultations between counsel there was a conference with the Judge, in which both sides attended, in his chambers. It was reported that no testimony would be introduced on the charge of adultery, limiting the case to cruelty.

When the Judge finally took the bench, he asked that all be excluded from the room but attorneys and a stenographer, and the Court so ordered.

Counsel for the petitioner then introduced evidence to substantiate the charge of cruelty.

Mrs. Crowley testified to repeated acts of cruelty of her husband, and was substantiated by Charles Nuratti, a Japanese boy, and Margaret Borland, both servants in the family.

The next question, which arose, was to the disposition of the homestead on Alice street. Mrs. Crowley's counsel wanted the home to be deeded to her but the other side objected, and finally W. R. Davis, who appeared for Mrs. Crowley, agreed that she should use it to the children.

After the evidence regarding cruelty no attempt was made to substantiate any other charge, whereupon Dr. Crowley offered to disprove the serious charges involving Mrs. A. G. Ainsworth but the matter was not yet gone into.

The decree will be so worded so as to set forth that the allegegation regarding Mrs. Ainsworth was unfounded. The disposition of the case occupied but a few moments of the court's time, and when the doors were opened another Oakland sensation had gone into history.

"From Sire to Son" has caught the popular fancy and is drawing crowded houses nightly.

THE NEW WOMEN

Of the Berkeley High School to Meet the Boys in Debate.

Boys vs. Girls

One of the features of the graduation exercises of the Berkeley High School next Thursday evening will be a debate between the girls' and boys' debating societies of the school.

The girls have organized an Ecclesia of debaters. The boys call their society of forensics the Forum. In lieu of the usual reading of theses, the graduates decided to have a debate and the girls' society will try conclusions with the boys over the question of the admission of Cuba into the United States. The young ladies will contend that if Cuba achieves her independence and is willing to come into the Union she should be admitted, while the boys will show why Spain's irrepre sible American dependency would be an undesirable addition to the domain of Uncle Sam.

The deba e will open with a "challenge" by Miss Ella M. Bunnell, president of the Ecclesia, which will be answered by the president of the Forum, J. L. Kennedy.

The debaters for the Ecclesia will be Miss Margaret E. Doherty, Miss Elma M. Mansfield and Miss Mary T. Gallagher. Carlton H. Parker, Erle C. Parks and George O. Brehm will talk for the Forum. Each debater will be allowed ten minutes five minutes being given to the affirmative for a closing speech.

P. R. Boone, president of the Board of Education of Berkeley, will preside. The judges chosen to decide the contest between the boys and girls are Colonel Charles H. Greenleaf, Rev. George B. Hatch and Attorney W. H. Waste.

Artists Hold A Meeting

The second meeting of the Ruskin Art and Literary Club was held last evening at the residence of A. F. Wyckoll, on Bancroft Way. The chief topic of the evening was the discussion of the works of the old masters. Mr. Nicoll iii, of Oakland, exhibited several casts by Raphael, Michael Angelo and Charles H. Keeler, the founder of the club, delivered an address upon the work of the artists—

"From Sire to Son," is the best American drama ever written, and it is being exceptionally well presented at the Oakland this week by the Nolles Company.

The West Berkeley Republican Club will meet this evening at the rooms of the Progressive Club on University avenue near Fifth street.

THE MISSING FOUND.

Florence Gleisner the Young Oakland Girl

WHOM THE POLICE HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

Discovered In a Lodging House Her Betrayer Was Compelled to Make Her His Wife

A Little Romance.

Pretty Florence Gleisner, who on May 20th mysteriously disappeared from her home in Oakland, was arrested and married within the lapse of a few hours.

Miss Gleisner, although but 15 years of age, has developed wayward habits which her mother was unable to control. At the time of her disappearance a young man named Harry Ledgett, with whom she had kept company for some time, was suspected of complicity in the mystery surrounding her abrupt departure. Ledgett, however, avoided arrest by proving an alibi, he having started for San Jose on his wheel the day of the girl's disappearance.

For days and days the authorities and the Humane Society officers hunted for the missing girl, but to no avail. It now transpires that during that time Miss Gleisner was stopping at a lodging house on Sixth street and Broadway in Oakland. She became alarmed at the search that was being made for her and fled to San Francisco.

After a diligent search there the authorities located the girl and yesterday morning Detective Williams of Oakland brought her home, baggage and all. After her arrival Mrs. Lydia Prescott of the Humane Society had her booked for vagrancy, while she went out for Ledgett.

It later developed that Ledgett had successfully concealed the fact that he knew of the girl's whereabouts and that he had established her in rooms at Turk and Market streets, San Francisco. He had seen her regularly and provided for her maintenance.

The remarkable disclosure was made that the girl had demanded marriage of Ledgett, who agreed, but resolved to let the mother, in Oakland, into the secret. Mrs. Gleisner was taken to see her daughter and a promise to preserve secrecy was obtained from her. The marriage was discussed by the trio, and it was agreed the couple should be wedded. Ledgett insisted, however, that his intention be kept secret, as he was a minor and his father would object to the union.

So the girl's mother returned to Oakland and did not even divulge the fact that she knew her daughter to be safe to the distracted father, who was suffering keenly.

When Ledgett and the girl had given up the facts at the prison, and Mrs. Prescott had argued with him over the matter, a marriage was speedily arranged, and, amid the surroundings grim and foreboding, pretty Florence Gleisner and sturdy Harry Ledgett were made man and wife by Justice Cliff, who added to his closing remarks, a gentle censure and wishes for a happy future.

Spoons Free to All.

I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A, St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant plated hook spoon to any one who sending her ten cent stamps. I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends, and made $13 in two hours, taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity. It cannot slip into the dish or cooking vessel, being held in the place by a hook on the back. The spoon is something housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were first invented. Any one can get a sample spoon by sending ten 2 cent stamps to Miss Fritz. This is a splendid way to make money around home. Very truly,

ITS BATH BEACH

Where the Grand Picnic for Berkeley People will be Held.

Bath Beach.

Now that a long cherished idea of the GAZETTE is in a way of being accomplished, namely the creation of a public bath house on the beach at the West end, it has been thought best to give the children who are just entering upon their summer vacation an opportunity to have a little outing upon the beach and at the same time give older ones a chance to see what kind of a place Berkeley really affords for bathing purposes.

We venture to say that not twenty people in East Berkeley have the least idea of any beach at all. They are perhaps aware that the water leaves the shores on the west line of the town. Only this and nothing more.

It will be a surprise to those who have never made a personal examination of what the GAZETTE has ever been calling attention to. The seed has been cast in good ground. After carefully looking into all the details and thoroughly examining the whole matter William Whitney of North Berkeley, one of our resident capitalists, has associated others with him and have already commenced the construction of a building to be used by bathers. It will take some little time to get every thing in shape for active operation. Everything will be pushed forward as fast as possible.

On Saturday everybody is invited down to what will be known here after as the "Bath Beach" for its inspection. Arrangements have been made with the horse car road company between East and West Berkeley to carry children accompanied by their parents or guardians the round trip for one fare. Transportation will be provided at the terminus of the horse car line to Bath Beach. Those desiring to go in bathing will have to carry suits of their own the company not being ready to start the business on that day. Dressing rooms will be provided for ladies and children. When the business is opened to the public there will be all necessary articles supplied at the bath houses.

To the school children of Berkeley a special invitation is extended. The connection by teams from the end of the car line to the bath houses will not commence until the car which leaves East Berkeley at 10 o'clock in the morning arrives at the terminus. Many will probably take a light lunch along and make a picnic day of it.

Officers will be on and about the Beach to prevent any bad conduct or interference with the visitors. Saturday afternoon has been selected as it appeared to be the time when most of our people could go on an excursion of this kind.

Five Hundred Millions.

Washington, June 11.—Chairman Cannon of the House appropriation committee and Sayers of Texas, who is at the head of the minority of the committee, are preparing elaborate statements of the appropriations this session, which will be given to the press tomorrow.

The actual appropriations (inclusive of future liabilities contained in the contracts authorized) reach the grand total of $500,000,000.

Took Pills.

Visalia, June 11.—Ben Dice, a rancher living on the Tule river, twenty miles southeast of here, killed his brother-in-law, Grant Smith, last evening.

They quarreled about water in an irrigating ditch. Dice's wife attempted to remove the dam in the ditch on Smith's place and Smith interfered to prevent it.

Dice, who was sitting in his buggy, then shot Smith, using a shotgun loaded with duck shot, killing him instantly.

Dice surrended to the constable at Tipton, who lodged him in jail here this morning.

The Coroner and a stenographer have gone to the scene to hold an inquest. Dice's wife is a sister of the murdered man.

Bad blood has existed between the two families for some time in regard to the water right.

ELI GETS THERE

The National Republican Committee Seats

ELI DENNISON AND ALSO MR. HOCHHEIMER

Sam Shortridge and W. W. Montague Give Way to Spear and Kowalaski

Eli Gets There

St. Louis, Mo., June 11.—Chairman Carter called the National Committee to order at 10 o'clock to-day, notwithstanding the absence of fully half the members.

The day's work was begun with the hearing of the California contests, beginning with that of the Third District.

The claimants in this case were, on one side C. M. Belshaw and W. B. Parker, and on the other Eli Dennison and Hochheimer.

Congressman Hilborn appeared for Belshaw and Parker. Mr. Hilborn gave an outline of the grounds of the contest, claiming that Belshaw and Parker were the regular nominees, their selection having been made by a convention which resulted from primaries, while Dennison and Hochheimer were chosen by delegates selected by appointment.

The State delegation had indorsed the proceedings of the convention which chose Belshaw and Parker by sending the delegates to the State convention by a vote of 8 to 1. He said that both delegations were friendly to McKinley.

Judge Thompson of Ohio represented the interests of Denison and Hochheimer. He contended that the committee would not go into the irregularities of primaries and county county convensions, and said that as there was no district committee in the Third District the State committee had appointed district delegates and that the committee had proceeded in the regular manner according to the call for the convention.

Furthermore a large proportion of the so-called primary convention delegates were appointed, as were the delegates to the other convention by superior committees.

Committeeman Payne moved that Denison and Hochheimer be placed upon the roll, and the motion prevailed without division.

The contest in the Fourth district, including the greater part of San Francisco, was waged by W. W. Montague and Samuel Shortridge against J. S. Spear and H. L. Kowalsky, who claimed to be the regularly selected delegates. This contest has been spirited from the beginning.

Mr. Shortridge was the spokesman of the contestants. The State committee had, he said, recognized the convention by which he and monta were chosen.

Judge Thompson, speaking for Spear and Kowalsky, said the only question at issue was whether there was a quorum present of eleven members of the State committee residing in the district. He was not interested in the prospective of proxies.

Mr. Shortridge declared in reply that the first meeting was practically a proxy meeting, and the regular committeemen were not notified of the meeting.

Spear and Kowalsky are McKinley men. Montague and Shortridge are said to be for Allison.

Spear and Kowalsky were seated.

Professor Warnick, principal of the West Berkeley public schools was a visitor to the GAZETTE office to-day.

Patronize the Oakland Theatre.

J. E. Little, station agent at East Berkeley, left yesterday for Salida, San Joaquin county, for a short vacation.

Berkeley Lodge I.—O. O. F. will meet in regular session this evening at Odd Fellows Hall.

One of the strongest situations ever introduced in a drama is that in the last act of "From Sire to Son" at the Oakland.

The Berkeley GAZETTE captured the city official printing of that town last evening, underbidding the Advocate, its rival, by four cents. We extend congratulations to Editor Nash.—Alameda Encinal.

This is the first time Milton Nobles has ever played to popular prices in Oakland, and as a consequence crowded houses are the rule at the Oakland Theatre.

Mrs. Amelia Richards, sister of Mose Morris, the popular conductor on the East Berkeley local, accompanied by her son, will arrive in Berkeley to day from Montana on a visit. Mrs. Richards has just been visiting a brother at Spokane, whom she had not seen for 30 years. It has been a great many years since Mose has seen this sister, who is the youngest in the family and he is, naturally, very anxious for her to arrive.

Ice Cream Made by a New Process

I have an Ice Cream Freezer that will freeze cream instantly. The cream is put into the freezer and comes out instantly, smooth and perfectly frozen. This astonishes people and a crowd will gather to see the freezer in operation and they will all want to try the cream. You can sell cream as fast as fast as it can be made and sell freezers to many of them who would not buy an old style freezer. It is really a curiosity and you can sell from 5$ to 8$ worth of cream and six to twelve freezers every day. This makes a good profit these hard times and is a pleasant employment. J. F. Casey & Co., 1143 St. Charles St., St. Louis, Mo., will send full particulars and information in regard to this new invention on application and will employ good salesman on salary. 3

What a Woman Can Do.

Last week I cleared, after paying all expenses, $355.85, the month previous $260 and have at the same time attended to other duties. I believe any energetic person can do equally as well, as I have had very little experience. The Dish Washer is just lovely and every family wants one, which makes selling very easy. I do no canvassing. People hear about the Dish Washer and come or send for one. It is strange that a good, cheap Dish Washer has never before been put on the market. The Mound City Dish Washer fills this bill. With it you can wash and dry the dishes for a family of ten in two minutes without wetting your hands. As soon as people see the Washer work they want one. You can make more money and make it quicker than with any household article on the market. I feel convinced that any lady or gentleman can make from $10 to $14 per day around home. You can get full particulars by addressing, The Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo. They help you get started, then you can make money awful fast.

CANNOT AGREE.

A meeting was held in Oakland last evening, which was attended by the members of the regularly appointed County Central Committee, and the self-appointed County Central Committee composed of Messrs. Aldrich, Pardee, et al. The object of the meeting was to contrive in some manner to restore harmony, but it was a dismal failure. The regular and genuine County Central Committee of this county were willing to agree to anything reasonable, but the Pardee-Aldrich et. al. Committee were opposed to anything that was fair or equitable. After some discussion upon the matter W. R. Davis handed each member of the County Central Committee a type written copy of his and Pardee's ultimatum. This ultimatum insinuates that the regular County Central Committee, which was selected at the Haywards Convention, is incompetent and dishonest, and that therefore it was necessary when the primaries were called for Mr. George C. Pardee to select one-half of the election officers, and in case there should be any contests the returns shall be submitted to W. R. Davis.

The ultimatum also states that the Convention shall be held in Vallejo, on the 22nd day of August, and that the Great Register of the county, meaning the new register where one is being compiled or has been completed in 1896, shall be used at the primaries, and all electors qualified as herein whose names are upon such Great Register in the office of the County Clerk of the several counties seven days before said primaries, and none other shall be eligible to vote at said primaries.

This would mean that County Clerk Jordan must have the Great Register printed in town for the primaries, at an extra expense to him of several thousand dollars.

The members of the regular County Central Committee, would not agree to anything of the above sort, and the Republican bolters left the rooms and proceeded to hold a meeting of their own. During the evening, they issued a call for their primaries.

On to-morrow, the regular Republican Central Committee will meet and will issue an address to the Republican voters of Alameda County, giving their reasons for not coalescing with the mug-wump, self-appointed committee and will head their address with the following resolution which was adopted by the last State Convention, which, by the way, made no provision for the self-appointment of the Aldrich Pardee, et al County Central Committee:

Resolved,—That it is the sense of this convention that all delegates to the County, District and State Conventions of the Republican party, should be elected at primaries or caucuses, regularly called by the County Central Committees of the several counties for that purpose, and that only such delegates as are selected at such primaries or caucuses, shall be seated in any of the conventions of the party, hereafter to be held. — Respectfully Submitted, JAS. A. GIBSON, Chairman

This resolution would seem to settle the fact that the County Central Committee elected at the Haywards Convention is the only legally authorized body empowered to call primaries.

As far as Mr. Pardee and his coterie of self-appointed Committeemen go, there can be no break in the party further than there has always been on their part.

Before the last County Covention met Mr. Pardee informed a number of the delegates that if the Convention nominated Jim Crane and Louis Schaffer he and his friends would bolt. The Convention conceded his nomination of Frank Jordan but not Louis Schaffer and the result was that Pardee and his friends bolted so far as Schaffer was concerned and knifed him whenever they could get a chance. They have always done this when a candidate was nominated that did not suit them, and they will do the same this time. Pardee and his crowd are rule or ruin men, and unless they can get what they want they will bolt. They are only Republicans when some of their friends are on their ticket, and outside of that they do not give a fig for the Republican party unless they can control it.

It is very evident now that there will be two primary elections called, but the Republicans of the County will vote at the one called by the Regular County Committee, and it will be the numbers that will tell as to which faction will be admitted to the Convention. In fact under the ruling of the State Convention as will be seen by reading the resolution printed above the Convention cannot recognize any delegates except those elected at the primaries called by the Regular Republican County Central Committee of Alameda County.

The committeeman for Berkeley and Oakland Township, Mr J. W. Striker was elected by the 37 delegates from his township without a dissenting vote and the other members of the committee were selected from their respective townships and wards in a like manner. None of these delegates who had the appointing power at that time, have ever announced to their committee man that they were dissatisfied with him, or that they desired a new County Committee, consequently when the Regular County Central Committee calls for primaries the Republicans of Alameda County will recognize the call and vote for the delegates whose names are then presented.

INGRATITUDE.

"The lady doth protest too much, me thinks."

A few weeks ago the Advocate probably for financial reasons had to dispense with the services of Fred R. Nugent as a reporter. Since that time he has been in the employ of the GAZETTE. Several times he has been threatened with a "roasting."

Last evening the Editor of the Advocate stabs him in the back by saying "that while we feel only the highest regard for the young man, and have no desire to hamper his work on a contemporary, we feel obliged to protect our friends and hereby notify them that Mr. Nugent is no longer connected with the Advocate."

The GAZETTE announced the fact in its columns at the time Mr. Nugent became connected with this paper as a reporter and the public is fully aware of it. The endeavor to "protect our friends" is all bosh and the insinuation that Mr. Nugent is working under false colors for the purpose of getting news is simply a gratuitous falsehood and only intended to do injury to a young man who bears the best reputation among the people of Berkeley where he is so well known. The avenues for obtaining news are as much open to this paper as any other and when the energy necessary to get it is put forth it seems not only unbecoming for our contemporary to find fault because it is done but base ingratitude when it pats the back, with a sharpened hair pin, of the young man who shows himself to be ever on the alert, in a legitimate way to get such news as the residents of Berkeley desire to be made aware of.

The Berkeley GAZETTE has opened a contest to determine who are the most popular telephone and telegraph girls in Alameda county. The winners are to enjoy a two weeks' sojourn at Highland Springs at the expense of the GAZETTE, including transportation to and from that favorite resort. Inasmuch as many a novel idea is originated in the fertile brain of the enterprising publisher of Berkeley's leading newspaper. We have visited Highland Springs and know whereof we speak when we say that that resort has no superior in the State.—Alameda Encenal.

SNOWFLAKES.

Come, children, [illegible]
From the cold, gray old world's at rest;
While I sing, 'Cross the ocean foam,
Light as thistle-down on the [illegible]
Soft they fall upon the winter night,
Hanging down on the moon's pale light.

They fall, fall, fall
Through the watery night,
Till the gray old world is hid from sight.

Then the earth is robed in a robe of white,
Soft they fall, fall, fall,
Over all.

Then winter in his bitterest blasts may bring,
But the world is warm where the snows lies deep,
And those who have faithful ward will keep
Until comes with their snowy covering
The flowers will wait for the voice of spring.

THE MILL SPRITE.

The great stone flouring mills of the northwestern wheat region have little about them to remind one of the modest structures that clatteringly turn into flour the farmers' grain in the country districts farther east. There are no farmers driving up to the door and unloading dusty sacks of yellow wheat while they chat with the miller. Whole freight trains instead; off their noisy way under massive archways into the building, and car after car is emptied in a twinkling, each one discharging its load through a trapdoor in its floor. Then the cars, having been almost as quickly loaded with flour as they were emptied of grain, are pushed on through another great stone archway and go forth to carry the product to eastern markets.

In the Perthian mill there was generally one onlooker as the trains unloaded who took no part in the work. Annie, the little crippled daughter of the janitor, limped up and down the platform, in and out of the mill as well as her lameness would allow. Brakemen, engineers and shippers all had a pleasant word for her. "The mill sprite," one engineer of a poetic turn of mind had called her, and, she knew why that name, even among those who did not know what the phrase meant.

About mid-summer a new superintendent, Mr. Griswold, came to the mill.

"Aren't you afraid of being caught in the machinery?" he asked one hot evening, when he found Annie perched up a wide beam watching the wheat flow downward like a golden river.

"No. I've always lived in the mill and go everywhere," she answered.

"Night and day too?"

"Yes; it's prettier at night," she answered simply, and the superintendent, whose heart sometimes swelled with admiration when the great structure was lighted with electricity, agreed with her. He stopped a moment to watch the swinging lever which, at a pull from an assistant's hand, pushed back the heavy cover to the deep bin and allowed a carload of new wheat, fresh from the prairie, to flow like a torrent into the receptacle.

"I would be deadly to be under that shower," Mr. Griswold said half to himself and passed on.

A few evenings afterward, when she was left alone by her father in the janitor's pretty quarters in the front of the mill, Annie's thoughts called up this remark of the superintendent about the stream of wheat. Just then she heard a low, rumbling sound in the distance. Another train of wheat was coming. It would be unloaded in the night, she started for the door to see it roll past and glided out along a dark wall toward the tracks.

Just before she came to a corner she heard low voices from around the turn. Two men were whispering hoarsely.

"The last night of the month always brings it, you know," one said.

"Yes, but how can we get to it? The watch will be on."

"That's all right. I've been studying the thing out. The superintendent is here alone tonight. The office men are sick."

The rest of the train was coming nearer and the men raised their voices.

"He may show light an' ring in an alarm," said the second speaker.

"No danger," was the reply. It came so sharply that it seemed to be hissed in the robber's ear. "It won't take more than a minute to settle him. We'll just wait till the train is in."

With a roar came the heavy freight, a rattle and crash of cars, a shower of sparks as it tugged up the incline, and all sounds but its own were drowned. Nothing was distinguishable until the long line of laden cars had disappeared beneath the black arch in the wing of the mill, and then Annie heard again:

"Don't get scared now. It'll work all right." The whispered voices ceased.

Presently she peeped anxiously around the corner. Nothing was visible now but the silent, dark walls, with gleams of light coming through the scurs of windows.

She wished her father was there and was still more anxious when she remembered that he would not be back until midnight. She thought over the men's words, "the last night of the month."

The meaning had not struck her at first. Now it occurred to her that they were talking about the hundreds of dollars which were in the superintendent's hands to pay off the employees on the morning of the first of the month. He was alone, as the men had said. She knew that the force was small that night because of illness.

These men were going to rob Mr. Griswold! She must go and warn him. But, whatever they meant to do, it would happen "when the train was in." And already it had come to a standstill on the dump platform!

Annie seized her bonnet, to protect her brown hair from the flying flour, and, not daring to go outside and attempt to climb the long railway trestle in the darkness, turned through a small door into the depths of the mill and started for the superintendent's office.

Although she had often been in the mill at night, it had seldom been in this direction, and her progress was somewhat uncertain. Pulling back her dress from contact with the mighty wheels, stepping over shafts and leaping along beams that connected the huge machines, she finally arrived at the office door, which was fortunately open, and, finding her way in the dark to the desk, felt for the lamp. Striking a match, she found it again, and in a moment more was at the door of the superintendent's office.

Impatiently she pounded on its panels. There was no response. Straightening her poor little body to its greatest height, she knocked again, and then, with both thin hands, tried the latch. It yielded, and the heavy door swung slowly inward. She glanced quickly around.

Mr. Griswold was not there. The doors of the safe in which the money was kept were closed, and she reflected that the small night force was probably assisting in the unusual task of unloading the train at that hour.

One of the office she hurried, and, taking the upper floor because she knew its windings better and there were fewer belts and shafts, she turned in the direction of the great bins. Another roar told of a second car's disposal, and she caught her breath a little as she trembled lest she should be too late.

At last she turned a corner in the tangled path she was following and looked down the passageway along the wheat bins. A line of lamps led toward the gleaming electric light at the farther end, and to the right vast gaping spaces reached into the blackness far below. Above the locomotive's tugging, as it pulled the loaded cars but a place for the next "dump," could be heard the rumble of the mill's machinery.

Annie hurried along the narrow pathway—the very one on which she had met Mr. Griswold when he spoke to her about the consequences of being caught under the shower of wheat. Below, some 20 feet, was another line of planks leading past the bins, into which, level with the planks, doors opened. These were for convenience in inspecting the condition of the grain.

On this platform, his body bent as he peered into the vast bin at his side, was the superintendent. She recognized his light gray coat and russet shoes. She pushed on, intending when she had come above him to call and warn him of possible danger. The rope with which he had moved the lever to loosen the contents of the last car hung at his side and was still swinging from his touch. He was evidently scenting the grain for a suspicion of mouldiness.

Suddenly, before she was within hailing distance, though she was not far from a position directly above the superintendent, she saw a black form shoot out from behind a heavy upright timber directly behind him. The stranger sneaked toward the door of the bin into which part of his intended victim's body still protruded.

The lame girl's heart almost stood still with fright. She sank to the narrow platform, and crouching there in the upper darkness watched helplessly the struggle going on below.

The stranger had leaped upon the superintendent and was attempting to throw him into the bin, but Mr. Griswold fought bravely for his life. Once, twice, she was almost certain, the assailant had him at a disadvantage. Already his head and shoulders were hanging over the dark abyss into which a carload of yellow wheat had sunk and made no impression on the great space.

Chunk! came a sound above her head. Annie realized, with a shudder, that another car had been brought into position over the trapdoor and was ready to be dumped.

The stranger below had almost overcome the superintendent, and she saw the scoundrel glance sidewise toward the rope which moved the lever.

Like a flash there came upon her for the first time a realization of what a terrible deed was intended. The body of the superintendent, hurled into the bin, would be covered with the flood of grain, and his fate would be unknown for days, and perhaps for weeks and months.

It was but a second now before the end would come. Already the assailant had pushed off the superintendent's hands, and she saw body and limbs disappear through the narrow door. She could not hear the body fall on the soft mass of grain beneath, but she knew it was there.

The assassin tugged at the door. He had nothing to do now but closound fasten it and pull the lever, and then thousands of bushels of wheat would bury the unfortunate man as firmly and fatally as though the car above should itself fall into the cavern.

Annie sprang to her feet and gazed a moment helplessly about her; then there met her glance the long lever reaching out over the bin. If it only could be held! If the trapdoor were kept closed, it would keep back the grain, and the superintendent might be saved.

The stranger below had nearly closed the thick door. In a moment he would pull the slender rope.

She looked at the lever. A weight on the end over the bin would prevent the trap's moving. There was but one way to accomplish it—she must hold it herself.

On hands and knees she climbed to the edge of the bin; then, reaching far out on the pole which moved the door, she took a firm grasp. A little trouble told her that the door had been closed by the stranger, and she fearlessly swung off!

The slender pole bent and swayed with her weight, and she shuddered lest the lever should still work. If it did, she would be swept down into the abyss over which she hung helplessly, and the stream of grain pouring upon her would mean death to her as well as to the superintendent.

Her small, thin arms and hands were weak. Already the muscles of her wrists were aching with the strain.

Twitch! went the lever. The assassin was jerking the rope. Again and again she felt the jerk, but still the little pole did not rise with her enough to loosen the trapdoor. Although the whole affair had occupied but a moment, it seemed to have been hours. In an instant longer she must loosen her hold, and then—

The man was evidently growing impatient, and she felt a jerk of unusual power. There followed a cracking sound, the lever broke, and she was falling through the darkness, the broken piece of the lever still in her hands.

As soon as she realized anything further she was sliding down an inclined plane of wheat, and a man's voice, that of the superintendent, was saying something to her.

For above they could see the gleam of the electric light streaming over the edge of the bin, with those dust clouds floating in it like motes in a sunbeam.

"I saw him throw you in," sobbed the child, "and now they'll cover us both!"

"No, they won't," answered the superintendent. "The trainmen will have to fix the lever first, and they'll look about to see what's the matter."

Presently the door through which he had fallen was opened, and a lantern was swung in, followed in a moment by a trainman's head.

"Hello!" called the man. "What's the matter down there?"

"I'm here! It's Griswold!" the superintendent answered.

Annie heard a smothered exclamation of astonishment from the man. He summoned help; ropes were brought, and soon both she and Mr. Griswold were drawn up from their perilous position.

The experience of the night had added many lines to the superintendent's face, and, though he was relieved to find that the robbers, foiled in the execution of their plans, had vanished, without disturbing the safe, the memory of what he had suffered in anticipation still remained with him.

As for Annie, the little "mill sprite" did not lack for rewards and praise, either from the mill owners or from the man whose life she had saved.—Charles Morean Harger in Youth's Companion.

Fate of Two Snakes.

A Forest and Stream correspondent tells a South African snake story. Two snakes were at the bottom of a 60 foot mine shaft. The snakes were each about 10 feet long and of one of the most poisonous species, known as mambas. Now, miners and 10 foot mambas do not agree very well, and this is especially true when both are at the bottom of a mine. [illegible] been jumped sent a message down to the snakes with orders to come up. The message was a bottle of dynamite with a lighted fuse attached. The snakes obeyed the summons at once. They came up the perpendicular shaft with such speed that they shot up 30 feet above the opening of the shaft. When they came down, they were somewhat mixed. The two tails had in some way got tangled into a square knot, such as sailors tie. The snakes wanted to go in opposite directions, but their efforts were in vain, and they fell to and stung one another to death.

The Forest and Stream does not vouch for this story. It would have been all right to have the snakes blown out of the shaft, but the sailor's knot sent it to the column where the campfires flicker.

Washington's Commission as General.

"In searching the libraries for bankruptcy lore I found in one of the secret journals of the continental congress the act of congress dated June 20, 1775, to 'George Washington, Esq.,' appointing him general and commander in chief of the army of the united colonies," said Judge Jay L. Torrey. "It contains some quaint language—e. g., 'You are to victual at the continental expense all volunteers.'

"It also referred in a patriotic way to our liberties, as follows: 'And whereas, all particulars cannot be foreseen, but that many things must be left to your prudence and discreet management as occurrences may arise upon the place or from time to time fall out, you are, therefore, upon all such accidents to use your best circumspection to order and dispose of the said army, making it your special care that the liberties of America receive no detriment.'"—Washington Post.

Now, therefore this is to give notice that in pursuance of said order, said new registration will commence on the 17th day of February, 1896, and continue to and including August 4th, 1896, when such registration will cease.

What a Woman Can Do.

Last week I cleared, after paying all expenses, $355.85, the month previous $165 and have at the same time attended to other duties. I believe any energetic person can do equally as well, as I have had very little experience. The Dish Washer is just lovely and every family wants one, which makes selling very easy. I do no canvassing. People hear about the Dish Washer and come or send for one. It is strange that a good, cheap Dish Washer has never before been put on the market. The Mound City Dish Washer fills this full. With it you can wash and dry the dishes for a family of ten in two minutes without touching your hands. [illegible] They will clean, rinse and dry them perfectly. You can make more money and make it quicker than with any household article on the market. I feel convinced that any lady or gentleman can make from $10 to $14 per day around home. You can get full particulars by addressing, The Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo. They help you get started, then you can make money awful fast.

Ice Cream Made by a New Process

"I have an Ice Cream Freezer that will freeze cream instantly. The cream is put into the freezer and comes out instantly, smooth and perfectly frozen. This astonishes people and a crowd will gather to see the freezer in operation and they will all want to try the cream. You can sell cream as fast as fast as it can be made and sell freezers to many of them who would not buy an old style freezer. It is really a curiosity and you can sell from 5$ to 8$ worth of cream and six to twelve freezers every day. This makes a good profit these hard times and is a pleasant employment. J. F. Casey & Co., 1143 St. Charles St., St. Louis, Mo., will send full particulars and information in regard to this new invention on application and will employ good salesman on salary.

Dr. J. W. Lewis, 800 S Street, Sacramento, Cal., says that Oil of Eden is one of the most reliable medicines he has used in thirty years of practice, for the cure of any painful disease of a rheumatic nature, and will cure three-fourths of the diseases called heart disease.

This Horse Can Count.

There is a grocer doing business not far from the south end of Virginia avenue who has a horse that is very regular in its habits. He has learned that the bell in engine house No. 3 strikes 12 times every day at noon, and when the hour comes and the horse hears the bell he cocks his ears forward and waits for the boy who always feeds him at that time. The horse will look anxiously toward the store and wait a few moments. If the boy does not soon make his appearance, the horse gets tired of waiting and slowly walks to the stable. Every day as soon as the bell rings the first time at noon people hear by notice that the horse becomes restless, and, while a few moments before his head was drooping, at the first stroke of the bell his eyes open wide and he takes on an air of close attention.

One day the firemen concluded to try a mean trick on the horse to see how much he really did know about the number of times the bell rang. They pulled the rope that rings the bell 11 times and then stopped. Immediately the horse's eyes closed and his head dropped into the same listless position it had maintained for some time. The boy soon came out and got into the wagon. He drove home and ate his own dinner, but did not take the horse to the stable. On his return he stopped and put the horse in the stable and fed him. The whole matter seemed to be a surprise to the horse, and now the people in the neighborhood firmly believe the horse can count.—Indianapolis Journal.

Malarial Soil.

The opinion is expressed by Dr. Bachman, an accepted authority in such investigations, that the long current belief that the source of malaria is in the air is erroneous. The germ, he says, which is of soil origin, is strictly a protozoa, reaching its highest development in low, moist ground, with a favorable temperature. Surrounded by the proper soil conditions, this protozoa passes from one stage of life into another with considerable rapidity, so that in the present state of experimental knowledge it is impossible to identify it. Further, this protozoa passes through so many forms or stages of life that in some of these stages it is light enough to float and be transported by the moist air of low grounds, but in this state is comparatively harmless except under extraordinary conditions. "Not until the surface water is used does any real mischief begin, when by reason of higher development it has become much more virulent than that floating in the air, and a very short period of incubation is sufficient to develop a severe case of malarial fever in the newcomer who uses the surface water. From personal observation, Dr. Bachman declares that the exclusive use of pure, deep seated [illegible] affords certain immunity against [illegible] the same [illegible] to have to use the surface water.—New York Tribune.

Evolution of the Microscope.

The microscope has been very slowly evolved and is the creation of no one man. In its present form it is, like a living species according to Darwin, the outcome of the survival of the fittest of innumerable variations, the majority of which have been discarded. Indeed to one interested in microscopes and familiar with the present model nothing can seem quainter than the old forms which prevailed during the earlier half of this century and have since become extinct. In the evolution of the microscope two factors have been dominant, the demand for optical improvement and the demand for mechanical convenience. Both of these demands have been well met, so that there appears little left for the future to achieve until an entirely new direction is opened for further evolution. It need hardly be premised that the optical part is the essential part of a microscope. The optical performance of the best microscopes is today perfect, having become so very slowly by numerous small improvements. Although magnifying glasses were invented, it is said, in the twelfth century, compound microscopes with achromatic lenses have been in use barely three-quarters of a century, while the introduction of homogeneous immersion lenses dates from 1878, and of the perfected apochromatic lenses from 1886.—Charles Sedgwick Minot in North American Review.

His Present.

A little fellow came home from school the other day and announced to his mother: "My teacher said it was her birthday today, so I went out at noon and bought her a present with my 25 cents. I know you would like to have me." His mother looked a little anxious, "And what did you buy?" she asked. "Handkerchiefs," he answered proudly. "I thought those were a nice, useful present. And I got six for a quarter. We've got a lot left, too, and I supplied family that it was a success indeed.—New York Times.

Consoling.

Dr. Coke, at one time chaplain of Greenwich hospital, was, according to James Payn, "a churchman of the thawny port wine school." When called in to minister to one of the patients on his deathbed and finding him perturbed as to his ghostly welfare, he comforted him by saying, "Don't concern yourself about that, my dear fellow. That's my affair."

Morality.

Infinite toil will not enable you to sweep away a mist, but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement. We wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which could have no hold upon us, if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere.—Helps.

Limitations of Heredity.

Men are the kind of husbands that their wives make them. No man was born a husband, it should be remembered. Men inherit disease, temper, warts and moles, but they don't inherit wives.—Atchison Globe.

Seeking Information.

A lady riding on a railroad train was quite annoyed by the fixed stare of a long, lank, leathery looking woman sitting just across the aisle. She had piercing black eyes, and she kept them fixed on the lady's face.

Finally the train stopped at a little station, and the keen eyed woman leaned across the aisle, and, laying a bony, ring loved hand on the lady's arm, said:

"Scuse me, ma'am, but kin I ask you a question?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I jist wanted to know if your complexion is natchrel or if it's one of these inameled kind I've heered of."

"My complexion is natural, madam."

"It is? Well, I'm jist sorry to hear it. I was hopin it was one of the inameled kind and that you could tell me where I could git one like it. That's all. Thank you, ma'am," and she resumed her fixed gaze.—Detroit Free Press.

The rook is the only bird that repairs his nest in the fall. The same birds use the same nests year after year, and just before migrating they touch up their nests and put them in order for the winter.

Getting Very Much Mixed.

One curious symptom of the overthrow of common sense by science in such a study as domestic economy is the fact that the papers are frequently marked by grotesque misspellings, not merely of scientific terms, but even more especially of common words which in other papers would present no difficulty whatever. This is a mark of the papers of some schoolgirls, who study the subject of domestic economy as well as of older students, and to such an extent that an examiner is forced to the conclusion that this study is in some occult way a danger to orthography.

To invest in "cousins," to have the finger nails nearly "paired," "poodles" of water, "minch meat," "roasted stake," to have the drains "slushed," with water and to break a class up into "drafts," may be taken as a few examples of this tendency. But scientific terms are by no means safe from variations, as the two following quotations, this time from the papers of schoolgirls, will show. "Car bonny cassil" is an unusual yet recognizable form of carbonic acid. "Lack tail ducks" may not be so easily recognized. One might suppose that it referred to a species of waterfowl related in some way to the Manx cat, but it is really intended for lacteal ducts. Possibly the functions of these vessels was no less a mystery to the writer than the spelling of their name.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Water $3 a Quart.

In speaking of the Papuan Indians Mr. McGee said: "They inhabit a country of broad plains, with mountain ranges between them. The mountains are remarkably rugged and rise sharply from the lowlands. All over the plains live the Indians. The country is one of the most arid regions on the face of the globe, a whole year passing sometimes without a drop of rain. Geologically it is a curious place. The streams rise in the mountains, but never reach the sea, and the debris carried by the rivers, instead of finding its way to the ocean, is spread upon the plains by the rivers drying up before they reach the sea. Scheland, in the state of Sonora, was never seen by any one until about two years ago, when a party of explorers sent out an expedition to explore that region. They were instantly vigilant every moment, from day to day, week to week, month to month, year to year, expecting and dreading the approach of enemies. They were always prepared for any emergency. The dearth of water was the greatest obstacle to the exploration. Every drop we used was carried from 12 to 15 miles by men under heavy guard. Water there is more valuable than gold, and often we measured it out in spoonfuls. In counting the dangers and labor of securing water we estimated its worth at from $8 to $1 a quart."—Baltimore American.

Rapid Reading.

What an inestimable boon it would be if we had the faculty of grasping sentences, paragraphs and perhaps pages at little more than a glance!

That there have been men gifted in that way is an undoubted fact. Macaulay possessed that faculty in a remarkable degree, and most editors have it to a lesser extent.

He would take up a volume for an evening's intellectual enjoyment, and before he retired he had the contents fully impressed upon his marvelous mind.

Dickens was another of the remarkably rapid readers. George Eliot's "Adam Bede" came to him one day. Before his ordinary bedtime he had read it and pronounced this remarkable dictum, "That book was written by a woman." Others required days of leisure to read it, and the question of authorship was the question of the time in literary circles.

Of a well known lawyer it was once said that he was able to read a newspaper article or a page of a book at what seemed to the observer to be but a glance. Endowed at the same time with a powerful memory, he was enabled to digest at leisure what he had absorbed in haste.

Very much the same was said of Daniel Webster, who read "Don Quixote" in a single night.—Strand Magazine.

Just a Coincidence.

"What curious coincidences will sometimes occur," remarked Police Judge Low the other evening. "I was walking along Post street, near Union square, one night recently, when suddenly the bewhiskered face of Judge Campbell came before my mind's eye. I don't know what could have called him to mind, but I was still thinking of him when I saw a parcel on the sidewalk. I picked it up and found it was a sheet of music that some one had dropped. I unrolled it and was confronted with the title, 'And Still His Whiskers Grew.' It struck me as being so ridiculous that I sat on a bench in the square and laughed for half an hour."—San Francisco Post.

Paper Making.

The rags used in the manufacture of paper are first placed in a cylindrical machine, called a thrasher, which shakes them violently in order to separate as far as possible all foreign substances. They are then sorted, according to texture, fiber and color, after which they are placed in machines, which cut or tear them into very fine, short filaments.

Violence.

Violence never accomplishes as much as a little cold calmness will at times. A little persuade. A gentle word, a kind look, a good natured smile can work wonders and accomplish miracles. There is a secret pride in every human heart that revolts at tyranny. You may order and drive an individual, but you cannot make him respect you.—Hazlitt.

A Straight Tip.

Bella—I look best with my hair drawn straight back. I wish it were the mode.

Cora—Wait till you get to heaven, dear. There'll be no parting there.—New York Press.

Neither Andorra nor San Marino can claim to be the smallest independent territory in Europe. That position belongs to Tavorolo, an islet off the northwest coast of Sardinia. Its size is three miles long and three quarters of a mile broad, and its population numbers exactly 55 souls. From 1836 to 1882 the islet was governed by one Paoloto, who had all the authority of a king, but when he died in the latter year he advised the inhabitants to form a republic, which was done. All the adult islanders, women equally with men, have votes, and every six years a president is elected for that period.—Westminster Gazette.

His Worst Break.

"I reckon the durndest fool trick I ever done," observed Mosely Wraggs, who was entertaining his friend Tuffold Knutt with a few choice reminiscences, "wuz fallin down wunst in a dead faint in front of a big building that looked like a fust class s'loon. 'Twuzn't a s'loon at all," continued Mosely Wraggs, shaking his head sadly at the recollection. "Hit wuz a water cure."—Chicago Tribune.
